VOTERS ARE URGED TO PICK GOVERNOR

Philip Welter Urges Citizens to Band Together and Draft Ideal Candidate

(By Georgia News Service.)

Growing by leaps and bounds, Philip Welter's recently launched movement to have Georgians nominate their own candidate for governor is to be organized formally at a convention to be held some time in April.

Convinced that the rank and file of Georgia people "care greatly" what type of man is in the governor's chair, Mr. Welter is endeavoring to enlist the citizens in all parts of the state. He proposes that an organization of militant voters pick the best man for the post of chief executive, instead of simply accepting a candidate from among those who have selected themselves.

"Once I had my doubts," said Mr. Welter. "It seemed that people did not care what sort of man stood for public office. I was dead wrong—the rank and file do care; they care very much."

There is evidence in all parts of the state, Mr. Welter declared, that Georgians want the privilege of selecting a candidate for governor, and are no longer satisfied to select somebody from among candidates who have selected themselves.

"To get anywhere at all we must get together, and stay together!" he declared.

Mr. Welter is circulating blanks headed "What About Our Next Governor?" and asking "should we elect somebody hunting the job, or should we hunt the right man?"

"We want a governor who has no other thought than to do his job, who is not bothered about how his acts will affect his political future, but solely how they will affect the general good—a man of character, sense, judgment, honor."

He then asks the voters to endorse the foregoing statement, and indicate what part they will take by checking one or all of the following three statements:

I will contribute from 10 cents to $10 to the cause.

I will solicit the aid of my acquaintances.

I will attend a convention of my fellow-citizens at my own expense to adopt a definite platform and select a candidate to meet the above requirements.

Voters are asked to communicate with Mr. Welter at 3482 Piedmont Road, N. E., Atlanta.

Mr. Welter asks that no contribution actually be made until a proper organization has been effected, with a qualified treasurer, and has an idea that contributions should be limited to the maximum of $10. In order that he may ascertain as quickly as possible how many Georgia voters are interested, he urges that everyone communicate with him without delay.

Teachers Band To Broadcast Tomorrow

After having made itself well known in this section of the state by its splendid work, the Teachers College band will make its first appearance over radio Friday, April 3, at 4 p. m., when it will play for thirty minutes over station WTOG as part of the regular T. C. broadcasts from Savannah.

Since Dr. M. S. Pittman came to the college much emphasis has been placed on music, and as a result the institution now prides itself on the twenty-seven piece band. The instrumentation of the band is near perfect. The latest instrument added is the flute. Plans are being made for the purchase of other instruments to complete its instrumentation.

An interesting feature of the broadcast tomorrow will be a cornet trio played by the T. C. band's cornet soloist and two of the Statesboro High School musicians. There will be five other High School students playing with the organization. The band will be under the direction of Prof. William Deal.

Library Management Makes Urgent Request

The Bulloch county library management requests that all persons who have paid up memberships and have not received their membership cards, please call at the library for them; also that all persons having books from the old library please return them at once to the Bulloch county library, which has taken over the old library.

The management announces that they still have on the shelves a number of supplementary readers which they are anxious for the schools to be using. Any school that has paid its fee and has not called for these books, may get them by calling at the library.

The Georgian-American's flying photographer is being sent to Fort Benning at Columbus, to the University of Georgia and State College of Agriculture at Athens to Brenau, Riverside and the great textile mills at Gainesville; to Shorter, Berry Schools and the huge rayon mills and tire factories at Rome; to the Georgia State College for Women, the state prison farm and the insane asylum at Milledgeville; to Mercer, Wesleyan, Georgia Masonic Home, Georgia state school for the blind and industrial developments at Macon; to Warm Springs; to the great mountain and lake resorts of Northeast Georgia and the marble and resort regions of North Georgia, among others.

His flying photographer will have his plane piloted over as many other towns and cities between Atlanta and those points as he can reach on each day's flight. The route each day will depend on wind and weather and cannot be announced in advance on any day because he may have to change it to avoid thunder showers, cloud conditions that would interfere with satisfactory photography and many other obstacles that make such a project difficult.

There will be several hundred views, with two or three published each day in the Atlanta Georgian. Back copies will not be available, it is stated, hence those who wish to preserve the picture series in scrap-book form should make the necessary arrangements in advance.

Some farmers purchase high grade kainit or muriate of potash to use with their nitrogen top-dressing, while others purchase and use the nitrogen-potash mixed-goods top-dressers sold by many leading fertilizer men. Both practices give excellent results. High grade kainit is just as quickly available as any form of nitrogen.

Potash top-dressing should be applied when the crop is chopped out before the dirt is put back to the cotton. An early application gives the crop time to make full use of the top-dresser during the growing season. Under boll weevil conditions it is necessary to mix a crop early and the sooner the crop can be set and matured, the better the yield. The early crop is always the sure crop and the early application of a quick-acting top-dresser will insure a quick-maturing crop of squares.

Manager Allen Urges a Primary

Roosevelt Leader Still Fighting for Preferential Test in Georgia

Atlanta, Ga., March 29.—President Roosevelt's campaign manager in Georgia, Marion Allen, has announced that "any underhanded effort to ignore the desire of the people of Georgia that a presidential preference primary be held."

Allen said in a statement that it is "unbelievable that members of the state (Democratic) committee will ignore the overwhelming evidence of the desire of the people of Georgia that a presidential preference primary be held."

He cited editorial expressions of newspapers and county executive committees which favor a primary for selection of delegates to the national convention.

Saying a total of "more than thirty county executive committees have declared for a preference primary," Allen added, "the number will continue to increase."

The campaign manager said "finally forced" Chairman Hugh Howell of the state committee, controlled by Governor Eugene Talmadge, to call a meeting April 15th to decide whether delegates should be elected or appointed.

Allen also called for observance of Monday, April 13th, the birth date of Thomas Jefferson, as "Roosevelt Democracy Day."

He suggested that Roosevelt club sponsor get-together meetings to listen to an address by the president.

WEEKLY COMMENT
(By L. S. F.)

The Republicans are searching for a Moses to lead them out of the political wilderness. They seem to be very much divided as to who to place this coveted crown on.

A mudsticker sailed from America's shores in search of the land of Utopia. They are sure doomed for disappointment. The nearest to that that we can attain is happiness and contentment at your own home, and only by those who have a God-fearing heart, that honestly and diligently search by hard labor and honesty of purpose strive to make it so. And if you will look the world over for this coveted abode, then you will likely come to the conclusion that there is no other land so well suited to make your land of Utopia as right here in Bulloch county.

Politicians, when riding the other fellow's hand wagon, should never drag their feet, as it always causes a discord in the band.

The Ethiopians are still making a terrible howl about the Italian bullets nosing into their business.

The Grass Rooters convention in Macon must have been a howling success, as we have heard lots of squeaking and squawking ever since by the old line Democrats.

The politician's hand wagon is the most wonderful vehicle ever known to man. It has more different shifts than any other machine made. It has gears to shift to the front, rear, up and down, and to the right and left, and can be adjusted to any position the driver might need to go, should the voting public catch the politician in a tight place.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND THINGS IN GEORGIA

Atlanta, Ga., April 1 (GPS)—Political Calendar: The political situation in Georgia will be enlivened by meetings of both Republicans and Democrats during the next two weeks.

Both are looking forward to their respective national conventions. County conventions of Republicans are to meet in their respective county court houses at 2 p. m. April 11th to select delegates to the state convention at Atlanta, May 9th. The state Democratic executive committee will meet in Atlanta to consider the question of holding a presidential preference primary. Many counties have filed urgent requests for a state-wide presidential preference primary. The meeting of the committee will be held April 15th. The custom in Georgia has been for the executive committee to fix a closing date for candidates and in the event two or more were entered, a time for the primary. The names of the candidates appear on the ballot and the winning candidate selects his delegates after the primary is over. The committee has the power to select delegates to the national convention if no primary is held.

Free Police School: A training school for police officers throughout the Southeast will be held in Atlanta May 20-21-22, according to Ben T. Watkins, of Macon, who heads the organization sponsoring the school. No fees or other charges will be made for the course of instruction.

"Petticoats" Rule
Tough Texas Land

Fort Davis, Texas, March 29.—Petticoats rule this rugged cow country where a swivel-chair woman sheriff likes her job so well she seeks reelection.

Mrs. F. L. Sprout came to Jeff Davis county in the Big Bend country 20 years ago as a school teacher and remained to become sheriff. She refuses to touch a pistol, however. The sheriff holds a determined group of women who plan a full county ticket in the July Democratic primary.

Banded with her are Mrs. E. H. Fowlkes, county judge, appointed to fill the unexpired term of her husband who died last week, and Miss Virginia Lee Ellis, county treasurer by election the past eight years.

The men folk in this mountainous Western sector, where the Apache Indians made their last stand in Texas 50 years ago, have not announced what they intend to do.

Mrs. Sprout was appointed in 1932 when a youthful hobo shot and killed her husband, Sheriff Lee Sprout. She was elected to the term she is now serving.

Farmers Support
Erosion Control

If soil erosion is damaging your farm, jump into the family driver some sunny afternoon and visit one of the soil conservation demonstration areas in Georgia, urges L. E. Rast, state coordinator, and the Georgia extension service. This is one of the best times in the year to see what is being done to protect the soil.

These demonstration areas were established, Mr. Rast says, to show farmers how they can treat their own land. There are five projects in Georgia, located near Athens, Americus, Rome, Gainesville, and LaGrange.

With the co-operation of farmers, the best known methods of erosion control are applied on these project areas.

Here you will see how terraces have stood up under the heavy rains of the winter and the effectiveness of check dams, strip-crops, cover crops, grasses and trees in controlling erosion.

Mr. Rast hopes every person in Georgia, and particularly farmers, will visit at least one of the projects this spring and again in the summer when crops may be seen growing on treated fields.

Your county agent or members of the staff of the State Conservation Service will gladly organize a tour of any project area at your convenience.

Georgia License Tax
Deadline is Extended

Atlanta, Ga., April 1 (GPS)—Governor Talmadge has granted a thirty-day extension of the time for payment of state license taxes without a penalty. The new deadline is May 1 instead of April 1.

The state collects approximately $800,000 per annum from occupational and license taxes, which are paid to the various county tax collectors and returned by them to the comptroller general. Because of the mix-up over state finances and the change in comptroller general, few collections of license taxes have been reported thus far.
